

Goodbye Again

Youth Lagoon

It's five o'clock this morning, and the sun is on the rise
There's frosting on the window pane, and sorrow in your eyes
The stars are fading quietly, the night is nearly gone
So you turn away from me, and tears begin to come

And it's goodbye again, I'm sorry to be leavin' you
Goodbye again, cause if you didn't know
It's goodbye again, and I wish you could tell me
Why do we always fight when I have to go

It seems a shame to leave you now, the days are soft and warm
I long to lay me down again, and hold you in my arms
I long to kiss the tears away, and give you back the smile
The other voices beckon me, just for a little while

And it's goodbye again, sorry to be leavin' you
Goodbye again, wish I didn't know
It's goodbye again, and I wish you could tell me
Why do we always fight when I have to go

Have to go and see some friends of mine, some that I don't know
Some who aren't familiar with my name
It's something deep inside of me not hard to understand
It's anyone who listens to me sing

And if your hours are empty now, who am I to blame
You think if I were always here, our love would be the same
As it is the time we have, is worth the time alone
And lying by your side, the greatest peace I've ever known

And it's goodbye again, sorry to be leavin' you
Goodbye again, cause if you didn't know
It's goodbye again, and I wish you could tell me
Why do we always fight when I have to go
